

“We needed an experienced, professional firm that could respond quickly with state-of-the-art design concepts, along with experience in the latest office furniture trends. Forrer Business Interiors’ experience, overall size and staffing levels, along with their Steelcase product line, completely fulfilled that need.”

– Ray Erspamer, Capital & Facilities Project Manager,
Waukesha Electric Systems

□ Waukesha Electric

Waukesha Electric Systems, a local manufacturing company, wanted its new office tower to emphasize classic design and appeal to its primarily conservative clients. Their goal was to develop a space that featured a timeless design concept and transitioned their workspace from a standard cubicle layout toward a more stimulating open plan environment.

Waukesha Electric completed construction of their new five story office tower, but due to economic circumstances, the expansion was put on hold and the tower sat vacant for six years. When the company was ready to move forward with the project, they needed professional guidance with interior finish selection, furniture programming and overall layout of the space. By integrating classic design concepts with an open work environment, Waukesha Electric attained a functional workspace that also appealed to its traditional clientele.

Design by Forrer Business Interiors